How to Spend the Winter Evenings.

As the evenings are now growing long, it is well for us to consider how best to employ the long hours intervening between the close of day and bed-time. This time will either be employed for good or evil. These hours could not be better spent than in moral and intellectual culture. The head of each household should see that these evenings are so spent as to result in good to himself and his family. When the day's work is done and supper is over, how pleasant to have the family seated around a blazing hearth, and some one of them with a good book or paper to read for the information and edification of the whole circle. What a good influence can thus exerted. How many valuable lessons may be thus learned during the coming winter, time alone can tell.

Well do we remember that some of the most pleasant hours of our life were spent thus, and we are free to say that information obtained in that way has been worth more to us than all the schooling we ever received. An intelligent manhood and womanhood is the greatest blessing that any country can possess. The parents who raise their children to be industrious, polite and honorable men and women, confer upon them a far richer boon than all the lands and tenements ever devised; a boon which itself can never eradicate. The long winter evenings are propitious times in which to impress lessons of this kind upon the minds of the young. When the children are too closely confined or kept under a too rigid discipline, they are apt to seek a chance to free themselves, and when once at liberty they are likely to commit acts of which children properly cultivated would be ashamed.

Parents should impress their children with the idea that they love them and feel an interest in their success, and treat them as companions and warn them of the snares and temptations that will probably beset them in their journey through life and prepare them to be self-reliant when thrown upon their own resources.

If books and papers are not furnished and the evening spent in gaining useful information, they will probably be spent in idleness or gaming at some kind, and about towns and cities the boys congregate about groceries and bar rooms and learn vicious, bad habits, and sow the seeds of a reckless, mispent life. Let the head of every family resolve at once to spend the evenings this winter as we suggest. Subscribe for good papers and magazines, and procure good books and learn your children to become fond of reading, and they will never lose the desire.

One of the best plans to create in the young a desire for reading is to take your own home paper. It is full of home news, every-day affairs that they naturally feel an interest in, and seeing it in print has a wonderful influence over them.

Attention Candidates.

The usual fee for announcing candidates for county offices is $5, but in view of the scarcity of money and the prospect of several candidates, all the county offices having to be filled this year, we have concluded to make a small reduction. We will publish the announcement of such candidates as may be subscribers to the HERALD at $4. We will charge those who are not subscribers to the HERALD $5, but will furnish the HERALD to them until after the August election. We will always give an editorial notice of candidates' announcements free of extra charge. The announcement will be inserted as long as the candidate is on the track. The HERALD is read by at least 2,000 voters every week. When a sensible man becomes a candidate, he of course wants the fact communicated to the voters as soon as possible. An announcement in the HERALD will reach more voters in less time than a dozen runners on the fleetest horses canvassing the county and announcing the fact. Come along with your announcements, and make your aspirations known. Terms cash.

Moore vs. the Commonwealth.

The case of John S. Moore for the killing of Jas. W. Stearns came up in the Court of Appeals on the 18th ult., and was argued by Mr. E. C. Hubbard for the appellant, and the case was reversed by the unanimous opinion of the Court. A reversal was confidently expected by those familiar with the facts of the case, it being the opinion of a large majority of those who knew the facts that Moore should have been cleared. The Court of Appeals seem to share in that belief.

Dr. Head.

Ohio county made the mistake in electing a republican, but he was one of the best of his school of politics, and it is thought by those who know Dr. Head well that he will bring to the discharge of his legislative duties the zealous, address and ability of another son.

D. S. Cox, Church Clerk.

OUR PREMIUM FAIR.

We have received many letters from friends asking us to mention the fact that they are candidates for the different offices to be filled next August. To all such we say that your request is about as absurd as it would be for a merchant to send us an advertisement of the goods he keeps for sale, and expect us to give him a long notice free of charge. If you want to run for office announce it in the HERALD, in the proper column, and pay the regular fee therefore. We would have our paper full of candidates' cards, entries and prints of the various candidates, and could give no reading matter whatever, if we did a gratuitous work of publishing candidates' cards.

From this date forward, under any and all circumstances, we will charge five cents per line for the publication of obituary notices. We receive many long strings of resolutions on deaths, which, if all published, would keep the paper full of nothing else. We will give notice of death of citizens as items of news, but will invariably charge five cents per line for obituary notices.

We now have enough resolutions of this kind on hand to fill two numbers of the paper, none of which will appear unless the money is furnished to pay for same.

The Legislature met on Monday of last week and organized. Judge Ed. W. Turner, of Madison county, was elected Speaker of the House on the tenth ballot. T. G. Poore, of Hickman county, was elected Clerk, and E. Polk Johnson, of Louisville, assistant Clerk.

J. J. Parsley, of Clark county, was elected Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Swango, of Wolfe county, Door-Keeper.

W. V. Prather, of Cynthiana, was elected Clerk of the Senate, and John L. Sneed, of Frankfort, reelected assistant Clerk. D. D. Sublett, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Col. Bart Jenkins, of Louisville, Door-Keeper.

Col. O. P. Johnson, ex-Collector of Internal Revenue, was among his old friends and neighbors this week.

A very great desire is felt for his return to our town as a citizen again.

He turned over to his successor, Mr. W. A. Stuart, the Collector's office on the first inst. The affairs of the office were in good shape, and show Col. Johnson to have been an efficient and faithful officer.

We have had but little to say about Legislative matters, leaving that question to our correspondent at Frankfort, who, up to this time has not put in an appearance. We hope he will come to us next week, and every week thereafter.

Dr. J. S. Coleman and family reached this city by the train Wednesday evening, and was received at the parsonage by a delegation of ladies of the Baptist church, who had supper prepared and everything in readiness for the reception. We understand that many articles necessary to the stocking of the larder of the incoming pastor were contributed by the members of the church.—Owensboro Examiner.

Canyonville Items.

Editor Head:

The protracted bad weather, during the Christmas week, did not prevent the people of our town from enjoying a due portion of buoyant pleasure that are sure to come with the holidays. There was quite a number of persons in Canyonville Christmas day, and the most interesting feature was the unusual quietude that prevailed throughout the whole day. It has been said that Canyonville was noted for much drunkenness, but on that day, there was scarcely a drunk man to be seen, and but very few "tight" ones. The little boys were gathered together in crowds shooting deer "gins," such as fire crackers, paper caps &c., and all saying with one voice, "Christmas comes but once a year." Every boy seemed to enjoy the day in a very high degree, but a young man who has no home here, can find one in Texas that will not desert him.

I here give the amount necessary to an independent outfit for a small town Texas:

One hundred acres of land at $5 per acre..... $ 500

Breaking 50 acres at $3 per acre... 150

Fencing the same..... 150

House complete..... 200

A good team and plows..... 200

Total outfit for farming..... $1,200

Those who have not the means, and have to rent land, can do perhaps as well here as anywhere, if they are disposed to work. If not so disposed, I would advise all such not to go; and yet for the benefit of old Kentucky, I should advise them not to stay.

Jas. F. Austin.

Fordsville Items.

FORDSVILLE, KY., Jan. 5, 1878.

Editor Head:

The bright faces of all the little boys and girls around Fordsville tell us that Santa Claus has visited them.

James and little Eliza have given the presents to their little stockings with many toys.

The wonder still grows with me, why so many speak detrimental of Grayson (our sister county). I have often wondered at C. A. (your Grayson correspondent) to be it possible he has nothing else to write about than to run down his county. He don't write one kind word about Grayson, (his home). Now, if Grayson is such a hell as he tries to make it out, why don't he borrow some money of some good person, and leave? I guess the good citizens of Grayson could do without him.

I with a friend visited Litchfield last week. It is beautifully located on the Ohio river, and can do perhaps as well here as anywhere, if they are disposed to work.

There were several hundred nice and valuable presents placed upon the trees and the cost was hundreds of dollars.

Every little girl and boy together with the old folks went away with a goodly number of precious gifts. The many presents given away on that occasion will surely be kept as precious mementoes whether it is known by whom they were given or not. The people of Canyonville should ever be grateful to Cap't. Sam'l. and his estimable lady, for their unceasing efforts to set forth something for the enjoyment of their friends.

On Thursday night, Cap't. Sandusky, W. S. Proctor and L. Eskridge gave a hop at the hall over Porter & Eskridge's store, and everybody pronounced it a perfect success. The manner in which it was conducted, reflected great credit on the managers.

It is still fashionable for people to marry in this vicinity. Mr. D. F. Ferguson was married to Miss Jane Bratcher on New Year's Day. May their lives ever be as bright as the day on which they were pronounced "man and wife."

While others are marrying, often wonder if anybody will think of marrying poor old Jas. F. Austin.

Canyonville, Ky., Jan. 2nd, 1878.

Ohio county made the mistake in electing a republican, but he was one of the best of his school of politics, and it is thought by those who know Dr. Head well that he will bring to the discharge of his legislative duties the zealous, address and ability of another son.

J. M. Johnson is the happy "dad" of another son.

HARDWARE.

Having heard much about the "Long Star State" and having a daughter living there whom I wished to visit, I set out on Nov. 25th, 1878, to Louisville, and from thence took the route by St. Louis, via Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, as this road has direct connections through to Texas. We made the trip from Louisville to Dallas, in just 48 hours. As our trip through Indiana and a part of Illinois was in the night, we could see but little of the country, but found the latter to be a fertile, farm-like looking place. We looked at the wheat fields of Illinois, showing that the soil has been thoroughly prepared, and the wheat regularly planted with the drill, and we calculated I would at no distant day recover the expenses of my trip, by a better cultivation and a larger yield of wheat.

So slender, though, that we have no better crops of wheat in Kentucky, when our rough and careless manner of sowing, we seldom get more than half a stand on the ground.

THE GREAT WEST.

The man who has never seen it has no remote idea how vast, how grand. For twenty-four hours, we speedily ran over a country so smooth and so level that we did not see a cut or a fill in the road. As the road from Sedalia runs through Kansas and the Indian Territory, and enters Texas at Denison, and leaves the pine region of Eastern Texas on our left, we saw none but good land in Texas. We passed down as far as Burnet and took up our headquarters at Waco, the county seat of Ellis, which is the fourth county from the northern boundary as you pass down the Central R. R. to Houston.

The scenery is grand, beyond description.

The country is composed of prairies, apparently elevated and dry, with occasionally a creek with a skirt of small timber, which serves the purpose of fuel, and low dock for fence posts—the lasting qualities of which are said to be marvelous.

The soil of Ellis county is as black as coal, and generally of great depth, and is said to be as lasting that cultivation does not diminish its productiveness.

I am confident from observation, and from the best of testimony, that one hundred acres of this land will make a better farm than two hundred acres of our loan soil in Ohio county.

The grass here is yet abundant as the prairies are covered with it as thick as any domestic pasture, and is considered very nutritious. As there are no swamps here, there is no malaria; the atmosphere is pure. Cotton and wheat are the leading staples of commerce with the agricultural interests of this county. The sale of the last cotton crop was below an average, aggregated near $500,000. The defects of Texas generally seem to be too much drought late in summer, and too great a scarcity of timber. Timber for building purposes is being supplied from the pine regions of Eastern Texas, and can be bought on the railroad at reasonable rates, while dried posts and barbed wire makes quite a cheap and durable fence.

Wuxahashie is a thriving town about the size of Hartford, though not more than twenty-five years old, and gives evidence of thrift and prosperity.

At this place we met our esteemed friend, N. G. Wise, who is a resident of the town, he is doing a good business and shares largely the respect and confidence of the people. Mr. Wise has retained in a large degree his youthful vigor, and lively wit, which makes one feel that he is still himself, and that an old friend is at home in his presence. We confess to the enjoyment of a renewing of an old association that had been broken by the lapse of 21 years. We also shared the hospitality of his estimable lady, whose familiar face reminded us of early days in old Kentucky. E. G. Davis, Esq., is also a citizen here, and has the confidence of an intelligent and appreciative community.

Christmas was noted for much drunkenness, but on that day, there was scarcely a drunk man to be seen, and but

HARTFORD, KY. — SAD LACKING

Bart.

At the residence of Miles Wright, in Ohio county, Ky., on Thursday, December 27th, 1877, by Rev. G. J. Bean, Wm. K. Barrett to Miss Fannie E. Wright.

Willie, you must be a good boy and true husband, and whatever your fate may be in life, always try to "bark" it. Little differences of opinion, give due weight to the advice and counsel of your wife. Remember that before you took her she was always "right," and probably she is still right.

Mr. A. L. Morton sold his Daniel Park place on Rough Creek, just above Hartford, last week, to Messrs. Allen Burton, Erasmus Burton and J. J. Bazzeth, for the sum of $4,000. These are all industrious working men, and will make good citizens. They are present living in Daviess county, but will move to their new place soon. We welcome them and all such to homes in our country.

When used for rheumatism, sore throat, lame back, neuralgia, sprains, bruises, cuts, contracted muscles, stiff joints, corns and blisters, on human bones; and spavin, ring bone, gall, enz, scratches, etc., on animals. Cousens' Lightning Liniment is unequalled, and its effect simply electrical. At its name suggests, it is quick to relieve, and those who have seen it, will be amazed at its astonishing virtue.

Editorial.

Mrs. Sallie Peyton and Miss Mollie Harris, returned last week to Daviess county, where the former is engaged in teaching and where the latter resides. Miss Sallie has a large, interesting school. She is a rare literary gem, whose modest refining influence is felt by all those who have the good fortune to be associated with her. Miss Mollie Harris is quite prepossessing in appearance, brilliant and sparkling, and when you look into the depths of her whole soul, you do not wonder that she numbs hearts by the dozen. Come again soon, young ladies.

Returned.

From the premises of B. F. Riley, near Newville, Ohio county, on 27th December 1877, a sorrel mare, about ten years old, some white in forehead, one white hind foot, about fourteen and a half hands high, a streak of gray in her mane, and shows signs of having had a foal.

The good wife asserted her authority, plunged our feet in hot water, wrapped us in hot blankets, and sent our wrathful master for a bottle of Ayres' CASKY PECTORAL. It is a splendid medicine—pleasant to take, and did the job. We slept soundly through the night and awoke well the next morning. We know now we owe our quick recovery to the Pectoral, and its value to us, and we recommend it to all who need such a medicine.—Texas (Texas) Presbyterian.

Mr. A. L. Morton sold his Daniel Park place on Rough Creek, just above Hartford, last week, to Messrs. Allen Burton, Erasmus Burton and J. J. Bazzeth, for the sum of $4,000. These are all industrious working men, and will make good citizens. They are present living in Daviess county, but will move to their new place soon. We welcome them and all such to homes in our country.

When used for rheumatism, sore throat, lame back, neuralgia, sprains, bruises, cuts, contracted muscles, stiff joints, corns and blisters, on human bones; and spavin, ring bone, gall, enz, scratches, etc., on animals. Cousens' Lightning Liniment is unequalled, and its effect simply electrical. At its name suggests, it is quick to relieve, and those who have seen it, will be amazed at its astonishing virtue.
